Geranium

A perennial favorite among essential oil fragrances, Geranium (Pelargonium graveolens) has a wonderfully uplifting, calming, flowery scent. Because of its floral, fresh, sweet, fruity essence, Geranium is one of the most important essential oils used in perfumery, cosmetics and soaps. Folklore has it that during the 1600's, European gardeners would plant geraniums around their homes to keep evil spirits away. It is excellent for its aromatic influence to help release negative memories.

Historically, Geranium has been used for regenerating and healing skin conditions, as well as for dysentery, hemorrhoids, inflammation, excessive menstrual flow and many other medicinal uses. A great deal of its strength lies in its ability to revitalize body tissues.*

Therapeutically - This most versatile oil is known to have anti-spasmodic, anti-oxidant, and anti-tumoral properties. Dr. Jean Valnet, M.D. used Geranium oil in the treatment of hepatitis and fatty liver disease. Other uses may include fungal infections (ringworm), eczema, acne, herpes, shingles, hormone imbalances, circulatory problems and PMS. Due its naturally occurring hemostat-like properties, Essential Oil of Geranium should not be used in conjunction with blood-thinners. – Essential Oils Desk Reference – Essential Science Publishing

Energetically – Essential Oil of Geranium invokes the joy of watching a butterfly on a hot summer afternoon. It may ease the pain of humiliation and heartache. Popularly used on the heart chakra, it can activate memories of the past. Geranium may be applied to the sides of the ribcage and under the breast to stimulate greater self-acceptance and trust. Geranium can stimulate the pineal gland by gently applying between the eyebrows above the bridge of the nose. Take care not to get in the eyes. Geranium has an approximate ORAC antioxidant rating of 1,010,011 ~ Essential Oils Desk Reference and “Vibrational Healing with Essential Oils” – Deborah Eidson
